GEL ADDITIVES

Ceramides

Vitamin E

Binds free radicals & prevents their destructive action. Promotes the biological stability of the cells while moisturizing, smoothing & strengthening the skin.

Shea Butter

Guards against negative environmental factors. It is a soft fat derived from the fruits of the Shea Tree & provides skin protective properties.

Aloe Vera

Offers skin soothing & moisturizing properties. This natural plant ingredient provides regenerative benefits for sun damaged skin, & skin damaged from cuts or wounds.

USP Mineral Oil

Provides an occlusive barrier on the epidermis, preventing skin moisture loss.

Grape Seed Oil

Olive Oil

May improve the regenerating processes of the skin. This naturally moisturizing oil has a skin calming effect.

TECHNOLOGIES

SYNTHETIC FIBERS

Specific fiber types & gel formulations are selected for the look, feel, & most importantly the functionality of the final product

Microfiber

Wicks moisture away from the body, keeping the skin cool & dry.
It is very elastic, making it suitable for garments requiring stretch.
A tough yet soft material for products that require a more luxurious feel.

Acrylic

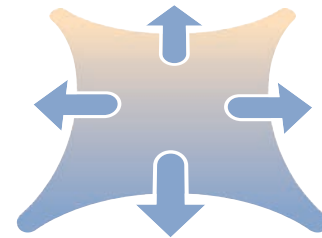

Mimics other fibers. Due to its stability, it takes color well, is washable & color fast. Generally hypoallergenic, it is an excellent fabric for many medical or health related products.

Nylon

A 'silky' material which is generally hypoallergenic. Due to its durability, strength & resiliency it has significant commercial applications in health & wellness products.

Elastane

Exceptional elasticity & strength, stretching up to five times its length.
Incorporated into a wide range of garments in the health & wellness industry where compression & shape retention are key benefits.

2-Way & 4-Way Stretch

A synthetic fabric that stretches has either 2-way stretch or 4-way stretch from one edge to the other edge & doesn't require a hem.

2-way or 4-way stretch contours the body making products more effective & comfortable.

Mesh Knit

A fabric weave defined by its lightweight feel & permeable texture.

Unlike most types of fabric, which feature closely-woven textures, mesh is woven loosely, resulting in thousands of tiny holes for high breath-ability.

Ribbed Knit

A fabric weave that is typically stretchy & elastic, allowing it to expand & contract without distorting the shape.

The ribbed effect makes the fabric feel a little thicker providing added cushion.

NATURAL FIBERS

The newest wave of natural yarns & fibers are selected for innovative products that lead in design & engineering

Silver Yarn

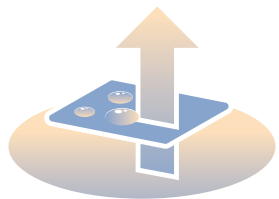

Textiles which are enriched with silver molecules are odor free & have Far Infrared properties which may prove beneficial in health & wellness items.

Copper Yarn

Conductive material woven into base fabrics are used in products for thermal heating & have Far Infrared properties. Conductive fibers are used for flexibility, low weight & versatility in product design.

Nano-Bamboo

Excellent for permeability, soft feel & color pigmentation. Nano-bamboo fabric is highly breathable & has Far Infrared properties. It is highly stretchable with greater tensile strength & is superior for products that require rugged use.

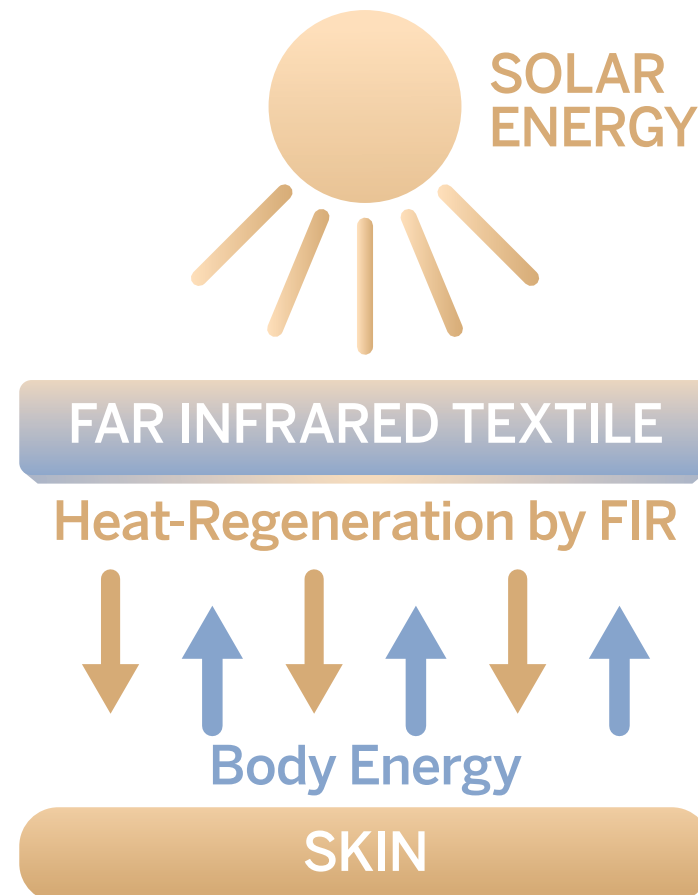

Moisture Wicking

Wicking fabric actually pulls moisture away from the body to the exterior of the fabric for quicker evaporation. Synthetic materials are typically used but some natural materials are found to be effective.

Far Infrared Fabrics

Far Infrared Rays (FIR) are radiated by the human body, the sun & minerals like silver & copper. Products made with FIR Fabrics are associated with warming sensations which may help to alleviate pain & provide an overall sense of well-being.

HEAT THERAPY

SILICA ISN'T ONLY SAFER IT'S SMARTER

Silica beads draw moisture from the air, which allows them to heat up more evenly than other types of fillers. This warming process makes silica less likely to overheat compared to clay & flax seed fillers. The heat & moisture are then released slowly over time, providing consistent, longer-lasting moist heat therapy. Silica will not attract mold or mildew & also won't dry out or disintegrate after repeated usage.

Why does all of this matter?

Because Silica Beads provide gentle, long-lasting moist heat. & moist heat penetrates the skin faster, getting deeper into muscles to provide swift relief from aches & pains.
